idd cologne 2026: Cologne's premium interior design event will continue in 2026

idd cologne is already set for another edition that will continue the momentum from its successful debut in 2025. On 30 and 31 October 2026, the urban industry event for exclusive interior design will once again transform the city of Cologne into a platform for high-end home living, featuring inspiring brand presentations and vibrant design culture celebrated across the city centre. In addition, the event's upcoming edition will introduce new opportunities to showcase products within Cologne's exhibition halls.

The new edition of idd cologne will take place in direct conjunction with ORGATEC (27 to 30 October 2026) and, together with the leading international trade fair for workspace and contract solutions, will form a high-reach trade fair week for the entire interior design industry. Koelnmesse is thus deliberately creating a strong, coordinated trade fair period with a comprehensive range of products and services for the worlds of work and contract, right through to high-quality residential interior design.

This is Koelnmesse's response to industry demand for an effective platform for suppliers of furnishing solutions and design for working environments and professionally used spaces, as well as premium interior design brands for the consumer market. idd cologne continues to define itself as an urban event, placing the city - with its rich diversity of design locations, showrooms and retail partners - at its heart.

hybridID: combining workspace, contract and high-quality residential design

Under the banner of "hybridID" (hybrid interior design), companies exhibiting at ORGATEC can target trade visitors from the office, contract and public space segments. The halls 3.2 and 4.2 are reserved for the hybridID area. On the last day of the leading international trade fair for workspace and contract solutions, the hybridID halls will open their doors to a wider audience on Friday afternoon and Saturday under the idd cologne brand. The offering will then be aimed specifically at interior professionals with a focus on private living spaces, as well as private visitors interested in design.

"The positive response to idd cologne 2025 clearly demonstrated the value of holding an urban interior design event in Cologne," noted Matthias Pollmann, Koelnmesse's Vice President Trade Fair Management. "We experienced how brands and visitors engaged with the event in a variety of ways - as a source of inspiration, as a platform for design culture and as a hub for a community keen to exchange

Spotlight on the residential sector

The upcoming edition of idd cologne will sharpen its focus, specifically targeting the residential sector and homing in on high-quality home living, interior design trends, materials and design concepts for private living spaces. The event will thus appeal equally to professionals from the interior design industry and private visitors with an interest in the scene.

Cologne resumes its role as interior design hub

The inaugural interior design days cologne demonstrated the immense potential of an urban format for the industry. With 106 participating brands, 16 locations distributed across the city and around 10,000 registered visitors, the event's debut was a resounding success. These figures confirm that both the industry and the premium interior design community have a strong appetite for a second edition of the trade fair.

The direct succession of ORGATEC and idd cologne creates a strong design week in Cologne for the entire interior design industry: from workspace and contract topics at ORGATEC to premium residential experiences at idd cologne. ORGATEC will run independently from 27 to 30 October 2026 with a clear focus on trade visitors.
